

Star Wars: The Clone Wars

Clone Commander Colt

2011 | THE CLONE WARS/TCW BLUE SKIES

Commander of ARC troopers defending Kamino cloning facilities, Colt's figure is a repaint from the 2010 ARC Troopers Battle Pack. This deco matches the TV series with a great deal of precision.

Clone Commander Faie (with Quinlan Vos)
2008, REPUBLIC COMIC/TLC BLUE COMIC PACK
Faie, based on the line's Kashyyyk trooper, has a retooled torso to accommodate a new head sculpt and removable helmet.

Clone Commander Fox
2008, THE CLONE WARS/TCW BLUE EXCLUSIVE
This Fox figure is a repaint of Captain Rex with the head of an armored Obi-Wan. He accompanies Padmé when she visits Ziro the Hutt.

Clone Commander Gree (Battle Gear)
2005, REVENGE OF THE SITH/ROTS
Gree is a repaint of an earlier trooper. His helmet's visor was a light green before being repainted a darker shade of green as a running change.

Clone Commander Stone
2009, THE CLONE WARS/TCW RED
Commander Stone introduces an all-new slimmer figure body. He has a removable helmet and great flashes of color all over his armor.

Clone Commander Deviss
2009, EXPANDED UNIVERSE/LC RED
Deviss, who actually wasn't in Episode III, is a red-striped version of the 2005 Clone Commander with red stripes.

Clone Commander Faie
2008, EXPANDED UNIVERSE/TLC BLUE
Commander Faie is based on concept art for Episode III. He comes with an unusual cloth tunic and plastic hood. The sculpt is mostly new.

Clone Commander Keller (with Galactic Marine)
2008, REPUBLIC COMIC/TAC COMIC PACK
Frankly, this looks more like a boxer in training, but it is Keller from the comics, a partial repaint of an airborne trooper wearing lots of white—and some black—fabric.

Clone Commander Gree
2008, REVENGE OF THE SITH/TAC
This version of Gree is an almost completely new sculpt with increased articulation. A commander in the 41st Elite Corps, he turns on Yoda when Order 66 is given.

Clone Commander Gree
2009, THE CLONE WARS/TCW RED
This version of the animated Commander Gree is a repainted reworking of a 2008 standard clone trooper, but with a new torso and head sculpt that captures Gree's look.

Clone Commander Jet
2011, THE CLONE WARS/TCW BLUE SKIES
Commander Jet, who plays an important part in the episode "Landing at Point Rain," is packaged both with his headset on and with it elsewhere in the package.

Clone Commander Neyo (Treachery on Saleucami)

2007 | REVENGE OF THE SITH/TAC BATTLE PACK

A repaint and retooling of a 2003 basic clone trooper, Neyo has a new head and better positioned legs and hands to ride the included BARC speeder . . . from which he assassinates Jedi Stass Allie on Saleucami. He comes packed with a clone trooper to aid his treacherous act after receiving Order 66.

Clone Commander Thire (with Emperor Palpatine)
2007, EXPANDED UNIVERSE/TAC ORDER 66
Wearing shock trooper armor, Commander Thire does the Emperor's bidding. This is a repaint of a 2005 Episode III clone trooper.

Clone Commander Ponds
2009, THE CLONE WARS/TCW RED EXCLUSIVE
Ponds is repainted and kit-bashed from several previous clone trooper figures, including Captain Rex. Notice his five-o'clock shadow.

Yoda
1980 | THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/TESB 32-BACK

The figure of the diminutive Jedi Master seemed to change each time it was placed on a different back- ing card. Initially, as seen here, Yoda had a bright orange snake, cane, and even eyeballs. The snake became light and then dark brown, as did the cane and eyeballs. There were at least four different green hues used for Yoda's skin through the Power of the Force line. Yoda is the culmination of a magical mix of talent. Ralph McQuarrie did original concept work on the diminutive but powerful Jedi Master. Creature designer Stuart Freeborn sculpted the face based party on his own—and Albert Einstein. And the tal- ented puppeteer Frank Oz, now a well-known director, gave Yoda his voice and made the puppet come alive.

Yoda with Jedi Trainer Backpack
1996, THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/POTF2 RED
Besides his gimer stick, or cane, Yoda comes with a plastic backpack to be used with Luke in Dagobah Fatigues to re-create scenes of Jedi training.

Yoda
1998, THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/ POTF2 FLASHBACK
A new Yoda sculpt with "realistic hair" on the back of his head comes with a boiling pot, his gimer stick (or cane), and a lamp.

Yoda (Jedi Master)
2002, ATTACK OF THE CLONES/SWS
Yoda, while not eager to fight, doesn't shirk his duty either as he prepares to do battle with Count Dooku.

Yoda (Jedi High Council)
2002, ATTACK OF THE CLONES/SWS
Although this figure is mainly a repaint, it's a huge improvement over the Episode I Yoda. It also comes with a Council chair.

Yoda (Padawan Lightsaber Training)
2003, ATTACK OF THE CLONES/SWS
Yoda is packaged with Chian, one of the younglings he teaches at the Jedi Temple.

Attack of the Clones

Yoda
1998, THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/ POTF2 COMPLETE GALAXY
This Yoda, which comes with a flying bogwing inside a Dagobah sphere, has a somewhat darker paint job and more detailed sculpting in his robe than the similar carded figure.

Yoda (with Jedi Council Chair)
1999, THE PHANTOM MENACE/EPISODE I
The Episode I Yoda was a new puppet that had a larger face to fit all of the animatronics inside. No one liked it, and it was replaced by a digital Yoda. Here the "younger" Yoda looks like he has mustard plasters on his face; that's supposed to be hair.

Yoda
2003, CLONE WARS/CLONE WARS
The "real world" version of the animated Yoda from the Clone Wars micro-series, he looks ready for some serious fighting.

Yoda
2003 | CLONE WARS/CLONE WARS

Yoda truly captures the unique animation style of the Clone Wars micro-series on Cartoon Network. It ran for twenty-five episodes over three years; the last season's episodes were about twelve minutes long, compared to three minutes each for the first two years. The series was the first introduction of Episode III's new archvillain, General Grievous.

Yoda (Jedi Spirits)
1999, RETURN OF THE JEDI/ POTF2 CINEMA SCENE
At 900 years, Yoda becomes part of the Force near the beginning of Jedi, only to return at the end as a spirit with Anakin and Obi-Wan.

Yoda (with Force Powers)
2002, ATTACK OF THE CLONES/SWS DELUXE
Yoda's hand magnetically attracts his lightsaber, which he uses to topple the super battle droid on a diorama base that is included in the package.

Yoda (Holiday Edition 2003)
2003, EXPANDED UNIVERSE/SWS EXCLUSIVE
Yoda in a Santa suit with his bag of toys became an iconic figure when Star Wars concept artist Ralph McQuarrie painted him as the centerpiece of a Lucasfilm holiday card.

Luke Skywalker

1978 | STAR WARS/SW 12-BACK

As befits George Lucas's alter ego in the Star Wars saga, Luke was one of the first four figures issued, and through 2012, there were at least ninety different versions of the heroic farm boy-turned-Jedi (many more if you count sometimes minute variations). The entire action figure line is based on the 3 3/4-inch height of the Luke figure. An undetermined number of the initial figures sent to consumers as part of an Early Bird Kit redemption have a much-sought-after double-telescoping lightsaber coming out of his right arm: a very thin second tip that could be pulled out even farther. And from different factories came both blond- and brown-haired versions.

Luke Skywalker (X-Wing Pilot)
1979, STAR WARS/SW 20-BACK

While sold as Luke Skywalker, this figure could be just about any X-wing pilot because of its generic-looking face sculpt. The helmet is not removable.

Luke Skywalker (Bespin Fatigues)
1980, THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/
TESB 31-BACK

The face sculpt is the same as the original, although the figure is slightly taller. This also has blond- and brown-haired variations.

Luke Skywalker
(Grappling Hook Blaster)
1995, STAR WARS/POTF2 RED

When actor Mark Hamill first saw this buff figure he chortled, "That's supposed to be me? I wish!"

Luke Skywalker (X-Wing Fighter Pilot Gear)
1995, THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/POTF2 RED

This is the flight suit Luke wears on Hoth and on his way to Dagobah. It is molded with the extra cold-weather jacket used in the film.

Luke Skywalker
(Classic Edition 4-Pack)
1995, STAR WARS/POTF2

This remade Luke has thicker eyebrows, less of a neck, and a much wider back-of-the arm slot for his lightsaber.

Luke Skywalker (Hoth Battle Gear)
1981, THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/
TESB 45-BACK

All of Luke's accessories are part of the figure mold except for the blaster rifle.

Luke Skywalker (Jedi Knight Outfit)
1983, RETURN OF THE JEDI/
ROTJ 65-BACK

Luke came with a blue lightsaber, then green. The cape had color and sewing variations.

Luke Skywalker (Dagobah Fatigues)
1996, THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/POTF2 RED

Luke in Dagobah training clothes is the first figure in the revived action figure line that had never been made in the vintage line.

Luke Skywalker (in Battle Poncho)
1984, RETURN OF THE JEDI/POTF 92-BACK

Under the removable cloth poncho that Luke wears to the battle on Endor is his molded black Jedi outfit.

Luke Skywalker (Imperial Stormtrooper Outfit)
1985, RETURN OF THE JEDI/POTF 92-BACK

Although the Stormtrooper disguise (and wet-head look) are from the 1977 film, this was one of the last vintage figures released.

Luke Skywalker
(Imperial Guard Disguise)
1996, SHADOWS OF THE EMPIRE/SOTE

This is the outfit that Luke wears in the comic and video game versions of Shadows of the Empire to infiltrate Prince Xizor's palace.

Jedi Knight Luke Skywalker
(Removable Cloak)

1996 | RETURN OF THE JEDI/POTF2 RED

This figure was first released with a tan-colored vest, but a running change was made to correctly color it black—causing an instant collecting frenzy for the tan ones! About 150,000 of the black-vested figures on Star Wars Trilogy Special Edition commemorative cards were given away at theaters across North America for the opening night of the Jedi Special Edition. They quickly commanded a price of $50 on the collector's market, but that excitement and premium price soon declined.

Darth Vader (Masters of the Dark Side)

2000, STAR WARS/POTJ 2-PACK

Sharing a pack and three-level platform with Darth Maul, this Darth Vader figure is the most accurate one made to this point.

Darth Vader (Emperor's Wrath)

2001, RETURN OF THE JEDI/POTJ

This creepy rendering of Vader during his attack by the Emperor's Force lightning has his head and hands exposed as if X-rayed.

Darth Vader (Final Duel)

2002, STAR WARS/POTJ SILVER ANNIVERSARY 2-PACK

Vader is jointed so his arms can come together to strike the final blow against his former mentor and friend, Obi-Wan Kenobi.

Darth Vader (Bespin Duel)

2002, THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/SWS

Vader's right hand magnetically attracts his lightsaber, and a button on his back makes the hand slash and "cut" the Cloud City walkway's vertical support.

Darth Vader (Imperial Forces 4-Pack)

2003, RETURN OF THE JEDI/SWS MULTIPACK

Sharing many parts of the POTJ line's Emperor's Wrath Vader, this figure has fully painted hands and head.

Darth Vader (New York Toy Fair)

2002 | STAR WARS/SW SILVER ANNIVERSARY

As a gift for major retailers and the media attending the 2002 New York International Toy Fair, Hasbro produced a very limited number of gunmetal vacuum-metallized action figures with a metallic-like red lightsaber poking out of the top of the plastic bubble on a special black-and-white card. It was a sensation and immediately shot up to hundreds of dollars each in eBay sales.

Darth Vader (Throne Room Duel)

2003, RETURN OF THE JEDI/SWS

Not only does this Vader have a removable helmet, but when you press the back of his belt, his arm swings and he throws a magnetically attached lightsaber.

Darth Vader

2004, THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/OTC VINTAGE-STYLE

This "ultimate" Vader figure has twelve points of articulation. It includes a lightsaber hilt that can be attached at Vader's waist.

Darth Vader (Hoth)

2004, THE EMPIRE STRIKES BACK/OTC

This is the third use for this sculpt but the first to have the bottom of the cape and shoes covered with the snow Vader walked through on Hoth.

Darth Vader (Holiday)

2004 | EXPANDED UNIVERSE/OTC EXCLUSIVE

After a few years of doing holiday figures based on Lucasfilm cards designed by Ralph McQuarrie, Hasbro decided on a different direction. It took a Darth Vader figure that had been released at least four prior times, coated it in glossy red, and placed it on a base with a wreath and ribbon. Tongue in cheek, but not written that way, the card back says that after a tough year of crushing Rebels, terrorizing planets, and choking underlings, Vader decides he "needs to give in to the fun side of the Force." It was the fans who rebelled, making this the final holiday figure.

Darth Vader

2004, EXPANDED UNIVERSE/SW SILVER ANNIVERSARY

Hasbro made a silver-painted figure on the anniversary card for Toys "R" Us—two years late. The figure combines most of a Vader Dagobah body with an Emperor's Wrath head.

Darth Vader (Duel at Mustafar)

2005, REVENGE OF THE SITH/ROTS EXCLUSIVE

This Target exclusive is a repaint of the first Anakin figure in the Episode III line, featuring a "lava reflection" and a Mustafar base.

Dannik Jerriko (Cantina Encounter)
2005, STAR WARS/OTC

The holes in Jerriko's face fit his proboscises—fleshy tubes that emerge from his cheeks, enter victims' noses, and suck out their blood and brains. Ugh!

Dark Trooper (Phase I)
2009, DARK FORCES VIDEO GAME/LC RED

This all-new figure from the video game has a deliberately unfinished look.

Dark Trooper

1998 | DARK FORCES VIDEO GAME/POTF2 3D SCENE

In one of the most ambitious packaging projects ever done for the Star Wars line, Hasbro released nine Expanded Universe figures from video games, novels, and comics on 3-D pop-up cards that become environments for the figures. The thick cards need to be cut around three sides on the back, and the hinged “set” then opens. This is the Phase III Dark Trooper, being developed in secret to put an end to the Rebellion. As a video game player, you have to help a Rebel spy destroy the project.

Dark Trooper Phase III
2009, DARK FORCES VIDEO GAME/
LC RED BUILD-A-DROID

This large new figure is based on the look of the silver Dark Trooper but fully redesigned.

Dark Woman (with A'Sharad Hett)
2007, REPUBLIC COMIC/TAC COMIC PACK

The Dark Woman, a former teacher of bounty hunter Aurra Sing, plays a mixed role in this tale. The figure is a new sculpt.

Darth Bane (The Sith Legacy)
2007, DARTH BANE NOVELS/TAC EVOLUTIONS

Bane creates the “rule of two” a thousand years before the Battle of Yavin. The figure is covered with Bane's painful parasitic living orbalisk armor. He was first mentioned in the Episode I novel.

Darth Krayt (with Sigel Dare)
2009, LEGACY COMIC/LC RED

Once Jedi Master A'Sharad Hett, he falls to the dark side and eventually rules the galaxy as Darth Krayt. His “armor” is actually Yuuzhan Vong implants.

Darth Malak (Sith Lord)
2007, KNIGHTS OF THE OLD REPUBLIC
VIDEO GAME/TAC

Malak is a Dark Lord during the Jedi Civil War more than four thousand years before the Battle of Yavin.

Darth Maul (Tatooine)
1999, THE PHANTOM MENACE/EPISODE I

This was the first Maul figure to come with a removable flexible plastic cape and hood. When Maul's double-bladed lightsaber has only one blade, it looks a bit out of proportion to the figure.

Darth Maul
1999, THE PHANTOM MENACE/
EPISODE I DELUXE

Maul was one of three unique figures that came with a lightsaber hilt that attached to its back. A push of the handle swivels his hips; a push of a button moves his arms.

Darth Maul (Sith Lord)
1999, THE PHANTOM MENACE/EPISODE I

Later in the year, a Maul figure with a cloth “skirt” was released. Another special feature: removable lightsaber blades, so Maul can use just one, as in the film.

Darth Maul (Jedi Duel)

1999 | THE PHANTOM MENACE/EPISODE I

No one was quite prepared for the popularity of the evil Sith apprentice who had relatively little face time in the movie. But Darth Maul was the breakout character. Unfortunately, the face sculpt on the first figure released leaves a lot to be desired. So does the first paint job, which features an incorrect tattoo pattern and an almost pink chin. That was corrected, and the new version shipped in cases with nothing but Darth Maul figures, since they couldn't be kept in stock.
